BOSTON PARK BOARD SNOBS—SEN. WALSH

The park commissioners of Boston were characterized as "snobs" by former Senator David L. Walsh at a bus hearing today before the public utilities commissioners at the State House up here at the present time.

Senator Walsh was arguing in favor of the granting of a certificate of public convenience and necessity to Abraham S. Kaplan for a bus line from Park square to Franklin Park. "What name, please?" inquired the court stenographer employed by the public utility commission, as counsel for the bus line arose to begin his opening argument.

"David I. Walsh," replied the ex-senator and former governor, to the accompaniment of laughter from the commissioners, opposing counsel and spectators.

OFFERS EXCUSE.
The stenographer excused himself for not recognizing the man who served two terms as Governor and

MITCHELL WINS IN MOVE TO CALL CHIEFS

Washington, Nov. 3 (A.P.)—The court-martial trying Colonel Mitchell held today that he was within his rights in asking for the testimony of a long list of witnesses, including three Cabinet officials, in defending himself against the disciplinary charge growing out of his attack on the government's air pilot.

After the court had examined the list, Major-General Robert L. Howes, president of the tribunal, directed the prosecution to "take immediate steps to proceed to facilitate the defense by securing the witnesses and documents called for."

An adjournment then was taken until Monday, to permit preparation and service of subpoenas. On the list are Secretaries Davis of the Agriculture Department, Everett R. Anderson, secretary to President Coolidge, and many high ranking army and navy officers, as well as others in civil life who have had contact with aeronautics.

Some of those named are in Honolulu and other distant points, and it was indicated that no decision had been reached as to whether all of them would be brought here.

The action of the court apparently means that Colonel Mitchell will be given a free hand in thrashing out the whole aircraft controversy in court. In an attempt to prove that he was justified in charging that the army and navy air services were being administered with criminal and almost irresponsible neglect of the best interests of the country.

Voluntaneous documents now in the government's files, including War and Navy Department records and copies of such letters as have been written and received by President Coolidge in regard to the air

CANDIDATES BANKING HOPES OF VICTORY ON FINAL RUSH TO POLLS

After eight hours and one-half of open polls today hardly more than a quarter of the total registered vote had been cast, according to a canvass of all wards made by the Boston Evening American.

The canvass indicated this total at approximately 3000 votes, which falls considerably short of being one-half of the votes expected by all candidates for the mayoralty.

Senator Thomas F. Donovan was giving a tremendous job in his district. The Nichols-Glynn-O'Keefe race is taken to indicate a tremendous rush during the final three hours the polls are open, or a generally asthetical condition which will result in a vote far short of that anticipated.

Students of politics were more inclined to anticipate the belated rush than the apathetic condition. They insisted the canvass made for this decision was one which predicted a victory of a general lack of interest being manifest.

Thus far Democratic centers have shown a tendency to report high balloting, while the Republicans are then just a trifle better. Nichols and Glynn appeared to be the most favored in some parts, if the reports of ward leaders and their workers can be accepted.

He stayed out all last night, and upon his return today he was accused by his farmer-employer and accused to have seen some of the Parlier relatives in the neighborhood. A short time later he entered the

'CLANNY HAND' CHOKED MODERATE

TELLS STORY OF ATTACK

A telegram demanding that I get out of the room under guard at New York and I'm going to leave just as soon as I am able to leave my bed."

The woman withdrew to join as she gave out this, the first real story of the attack upon her during the illness of the patient.

"I was asleep in my little apartment on the third floor here," she said, "when, suddenly, I was awakened by the feeling of a clammy hand about my throat. I was unable to utter a sound because I was choking. I did manage to gasp. The cold fingers tightened about my throat. I became almost suffocated."

BATTLED IN VAIN.

The men did not light the lights, but one stood in the center of the room lighting match after match as the other was forcing the gag into my mouth. I fought for a while, but I was so frightened and he was so strong that soon I felt the chloroform gas in my mouth. In the glow of one of the matches I caught the flash of a handsome diamond in a ring on the right hand of the man who was then winding me mummy-like in a coil of coarse rope.

"I shall never forget that ring. I could see, too, although I could not feel myself doing consciousness, the picturesque results of the two men. The glow of the matches shone down on them as they stood. I realized the dramatic setting for the scene."

The men scarcely spoke, and then in hoarse, guttural, disguised tones the shorter one of the two asked the other to keep lighting matches whenever the incense light flickered out.

"My hands were turned up behind me with a part of the same rope that had been wound about my body. I remember hearing the man who was holding the matches mutter a curse when he turned his fingers. Then I became unconscious."

"It seemed hours afterwards when I finally regained my senses. I knew I was lying out of doors. I knew, too, from the cold, that I was partly unclothed. The sidewalk was still in my mouth and I tried to breathe in through my nostrils in order to avoid further effects of the fumes."

"For a long time I lay there. I didn't know where I was but there was no light anywhere about. RESEMBLES COME."

"I tried to scream. The gag, made of a pair of my old gloves and a gauze wrapping, prevented my uttering more than faint gasps. I tried to wrench myself free from my fetters. The ropes burned into my arms and shoulders and wrists. I must have become unconscious again for the next time I remember I heard voices."

"Somebody was carrying me back into my apartment. I remember the voices of Mrs. Leland Allen, a neighbor, even before my eyes grew accustomed to the light. I heard Mrs. Allen say: 'Oh, I smell chloroform; then she phoned up the doctor that had covered the smell of it and said: 'It's on this!'"

"What has happened?" asked one of my rescuers. I told him the Klan had attacked me and had evidently intended kidnapping me, but must have been frightened."

"The men who attacked me must have known the plan of my apartment because they lit the lights. Rights save the matches. And they didn't use them until they reached my bedchamber. We know that because no matches were found in the hallway."

"There were scores of these attacks in a little circle in my bedroom. They seemed to form one continuous spot where the match-lighter had stood while I was being attacked."

"I have always been very open in my criticism of the Klan and its methods. I am a Protestant. My friend in New York is a Catholic. My nerves are in such a terrible condition that I just couldn't stay here a moment were it not for my injuries."

Mrs. Hamilton's narrative was interrupted by the ringing of the telephone bell. She arose with great effort and answered.

"That was my secret service friend in New York again," she explained. "He demands that I come to New York at once under guard. I think I shall make an effort to leave soon, but shall not tell any one when I intend going or where. They might make another attempt to injure me, even though they know I was leaving town."

Mrs. Hamilton is a comely woman in her early thirties and of a decidedly attractive brunette type. She has maintained her store here for several summers, but declares she may never return after leaving for "somewhere in the United States."

DELAY ACTION ON SITE FOR NEW PUBLIC PARK
The street commissioners held a public hearing today at City Hall on the proposed plan to set aside in Park square for a public park. This plan was approved by Mayor Curley when the Stabler Hotel people agreed to erect their new hotel in this city. Work has already started on the erection of the hotel.

Because one of the owners of the three lots the city seeks for the proposed park has other plans in view, a conference will be held with different real estate interests before final action on the site is taken.

WILD TRADING in the stock market. You never had a better chance to get, but your back, financially, than you have now. Those that know will make great fortunes. But how many know?

Some of the stocks most wildly bought are those that will fall the hardest when falling time comes.

Lucky the man who knows what he is doing and why. The other kind of man will have a dreadful financial headache one of these days.

THE COUNTRY is rich, however; the people earn more than they need to get, but don't leave the money in ten thousand different adorns in one big city. Stock speculation doesn't cause hoarding of the American people without whiskey used to do and as the new bootleg whiskey still does.

AS YOU GROW older you become tolerant. Mrs. Sarah Smith, of Brooklyn, says her views about prohibition "are not so strict as they were when I was younger, in nineteen." The lady, who has just entered her 103rd year, is still a member of the Temperance Union and the Baptist Church.

ANOTHER LADY growing a milder with years, although still young, is Miss Ida M. Tarbell. She has learned things she did not know about great industrial organizations.

Her life of Judge Elbert H. Gary, of the big United States Steel Corporation, just published, discovers that Judge Gary is a hero.

SHE IS, or at least he had added much common sense into the highest industrial unit in the world.

Perhaps, had she been forty years old when she wrote about John D. Rockefeller, Miss Tarbell would have discovered that he also was doing useful work—as was—proving that costly, wasteful competition isn't at all necessary, and gathering money to do, through his institute, work that the people have not brains enough to do for themselves.

LUCILLE ROBERTS, British novelist, in a little social romance, "atmosphere," found all the shabby wearing American "born-rimmed" spectacles, fancy shoes, and ready-made modern clothing. One was dressed in a shabby shawl and he was working for an American moving picture outfit.

THIS SHOWS what American moving pictures do for American goods abroad. Our moving pictures, dominating everywhere, from Maine to China, create a market for American goods and build up American prosperity.

That is more than can be said of some queer Americans, interfering with moving picture development, seeking to prevent American concerns from becoming "too big," as though it were possible for any American concern, honestly managed, EVER to become TOO BIG.

MRS. MARY MCGAULEY, 17, her children, who had eaten nothing, after they had stopped crying and gone to sleep, in a cold tenement room with a few burning logs over them.

She took one bag and a hammer, at one o'clock in the morning, crept along the streets of New York, a fairly prosperous city, and using the bag to deaden sound, she broke a grocery plate glass window and hastily gathered together an armful of food.

At that moment a policeman laid his hand on her shoulder. When she appeared in court, one hundred and fifty people actually shed tears at her plight, so the judge let her go with a warning.

FILM TAX FIGHT GOES HIGHER

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 2 (A.P.)—An appeal to the United States Supreme Court from the decision of the Federal Constitutional Court which set here on the new Connecticut film taxing law, has been granted by Circuit Judge Henry Wade Rogers. Judge Rogers was one of the judges in the special court which declared the law unconstitutional both as a revenue and police measure. The action of the court is under a Federal statute passed this year. The appeal will be taken by the American Feature Film Company of Boston, although the Fox Film Company of New York is in the case heretofore.

Movies? Pout! Paris Designer Done With Stars

ERTE MAD AS RENEE BALKS AT CORSETS!

Famous Costume Maker Quits Job in Disgust When Lillian Gish Insists on Silks

Carmel Myers—ah! She moves so beautifully! But Lillian Gish insists on silk garments in the role of a pauper. And Renee Adore refuses to wear corsets even in an 1830 costume.

So with bursting heart Romaine De Tiroff-Erte, the famous French designer, breaks his contract and leaves the movies flat. It is disastrous!

Los Angeles, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—The Times says: Romaine De Tiroff-Erte, French fashion designer, recently imported from Paris by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has ended his contract with the motion picture organization and is "through with the movies forever."

Utterly disillusioned, De Tiroff-Erte writes to tell from New York: "December 5 for Paris, where he says he can work quietly and receive the consideration to which he is accustomed."

"I came here seven months ago," he said, "full of illusions about all of the wonderful things I could do in motion pictures. But I have been disappointed. The story of my first production to be finished."

"It has been written four times. The last is the worst attempt and the first the best. I have designed sets for each story, twenty in all, and I have designed costumes. TOO MUCH SPEED."

"Now they tell me they want me for a new story in three or four weeks. Fifty costumes. I don't see everything. It is impossible. I asked them to release me from my contract and they have done so. Motion pictures—puff!"

And as for motion picture actresses, M. De Tiroff-Erte found them no more beautiful, no more inspiring to the designer than ordinary dressmakers' customers. Carmel Myers remains his only "pleasant memory" of the screen. "She moves beautifully," he exclaimed.

"She has a slender figure and is pleasant to work with."

"POOR GIRL" IN SILK.

Lillian Gish offended him. He designed simple costumes of pleated fabrics for a film in which she was to appear as a poor girl, but no. Mademoiselle must have them all executed in silk, "for when she acts on her skin acts with her," and where is the skin that would not act better with silk?

Renee Adore refused to wear corsets which Erte insisted were for a certain costume. "Can you imagine a woman not wearing corsets in 1830 costume?" he asked.

Altogether, Hollywood was very fatiguing to the Parisian celebrity, and the sooner he can be back in his dear Paris the better it will be, he admits, for his art and nerves.

IDENTIFY MAN AS THUG IN HOLDUP

John J. Shea, twenty-five, of No. 262 Medford street, Charlestown, was arrested today and identified as one of the men who took part in the holdup of Daniel Gold's drug store in Everett.

Patrolman James J. Hanlon of the Charlestown station saw Shea coming through Main street at an early hour in connection with him to stop. The signal was ignored and Hanlon gave chase, capturing his man on Main street.

Everett police were notified and Mr. and Mrs. Gold viewed Shea and declared that he was one of four thugs that took part in the holdup.

The police of Cambridge, Chelsea, and Malden have been notified of Shea's capture and will see him this day in connection with holdups in their sections.

Shea was accompanied by three companions, according to Mr. Gold. They cut the telephone wires before entering the store. Two fingerprinted revolvers, while the other two smoked Gold to the floor, unconscious.

The thugs rifled the cash register, getting $10 from it, and about $15 from the steam drawer in changes. They overlooked about $25 in bills there.

They ran out, knocking Mrs. Gold down in their flight. The thugs jumped into an automobile and sped away to Broadway and thence north in the direction of Malden. In their haste they neglected to close the car door, which hit a tree and smashed the glass.

WILL RUSH N. E. COAL SUBSTITUTES

NEW RAIL ROUTES TO SPEED FUEL HERE

Washington, Nov. 3 (A.P.).—Further steps were taken today by the Interstate Commerce Commission toward opening additional railroad routes for the transportation of substitutes for anthracite coal to New England and the Middle Atlantic States.

In two separate orders the commission reopened proceedings to consider whether rates on anthracite coal produced in Virginia are preventing its movement to the consuming territory and whether through and joint rates from Southern West Virginia to consuming territory may not be established. Hearings on these questions were fixed for November 12 at New York City before Commissioner Campbell.

Shortly before the Pennsylvania anthracite suspension became effective the commission ordered railroads serving the northern Atlantic coast territory and West Virginia and Pennsylvania low volatile coal districts to combine in making joint rates that would allow the movement of the anthracite substitute.

These new and lower rates went into effect October 15. The orders today indicated that the commission saw a possibility of enlarging their scope and of getting into the Atlantic coast consuming territory additional coal which may be needed to substitute for the anthracite supply. The Virginia anthracite deposits have hitherto marketed in a limited territory.

The West Virginia producing territory to which the commission will consider establishment of lower joint rates includes coal in Kanawha, Coal River, New River, Pocahontas and the Tug River districts.

MAINE PRISON "QUEEN" IS SET FREE

Praises Accused Deputy Warden as She Departs for Home

The same rather in the nature of a disappointment. It had been expected she'd deliver herself of a trade once she'd stepped out in a spot where she's perfectly free. But she didn't. She dropped her intended intention and made haste at leaving this vicinity.

When her departure Elsie Bates, warden and Elsie Bates, result of the leaders of the female portion of the prison's population. And in a probability the queenly mantle will fall on Elsie's shoulders. Report have placed her in the role of deputy queen since first the storm broke, and by all rights of succession she's probably knock the job off before dusk today.

Meanwhile Governor Brewster's councilors, counsel and counsel for Warden Eaton have gone to Augusta, there to resume the inquiry this afternoon.

Deputy Warden Colman will be the first witness called. The charges have concerned him fully as much as they have the warden. William H. Pataingail, counsel for Warden Eaton, has announced his intention of calling him forthwith and following him with Probation Officer Morrie Fish.

DEFENDED BY 45 INMATES

The affidavits of forty-five prisoners denying the charges of immorality in the State prison here will be submitted to the records of the hearing.

In deciding to accept the prisoners' affidavits, Governor Brewster is believed to have yielded to the advice of his councilors. The statements, it is understood, are of a general nature, emphatically denying the accusations brought before the board by the prison chaplain, Rev. Percy J. Clifford, now under suspension, and his wife, Lelia I. Clifford, matron of the institution.

Under cross-examination by Senator P. W. Hinkley, who replaces Attorney General Fellows by orders of the Governor, Warden Lester D. Eaton admitted to the commission that gambling, drinking, use of narcotics and immorality formed part of the life within the institution. Eaton related the story of the lax discipline, and "boasting" of the prisoners by "Dapper Dan" Fallon, a "life" at the jail, under examination of his attorney William R. Pataingail, admitting as true the charges made by "Chalkin Cliff."

WARDEN'S DEFENSE

In defense of the conditions, however, he pointed to the fact that the prison discipline was demoralized by a disastrous fire at the institution. He said that there are only 41 cells in which to house 260 prisoners and as many more civilian workers engaged in repairing the jail. The fire occurred in 1923.

The narcotics, he said, have been smuggled in to the prisoners, and every effort has been made to stop it. In this, the warden said, he is succeeding and there is now little or no use of drugs within the prison.

The drunkenness, he said, was being stamped out by closer supervision of the police and the warden. The prisoners, he asserted, had been getting drunk on "shellac balls" and on alcohol skinned from shellac. Those caught, he said, were punished.

The immorality was a result of abuse of the "Welfare Leagues" or of prison government, where the prisoners were put on their honor. "This too, the warden said, has been stopped, and the "honor system" which has been put in effect is slowly working out successfully.

"Dapper Dan" Fallon, elected by the men as head of the Welfare League, is a leader of men. He is the "Emperor" of the prisoners, Eaton said, but added that Fallon is co-operating with him in bringing the discipline to a satisfactory condition.

WARNED GOVERNOR

The warden said that he had warned the Governor early in the year that there would be trouble in the prison unless immediate steps were made to changing the situation of the women's compartments. This plea, he said, was not acted upon. In spite of his attempt to avoid it, trouble resulted.

Testimony of former activities of the prison revealed a general laxity of prison discipline since the inauguration of the Welfare League, of which Dan Fallon was the leader.

Their testimony, while lacking in definite and concrete facts, indicated that the prisoners found a new freedom under the Welfare rules, which was followed by a total disregard of orders issued by prison guards.

The men smoked and lunched, talked freely with the women inmates, and were immune to the guards, according to several former guards who appeared before the investigators.

COURT ENJOINS BUS LINE SPRINGFIELD-GREENFIELD

Judge Watts of the Supreme Court handed down a decision today enjoining William G. Maher of Northampton, Edmund M. Maloney of Easton on their servants or agents from operating the De Luxe Transportation Lines of buses between Springfield and Greenfield, unless the law is complied with.

Section 48 of Chapter 150 of the General Laws as amended by Chapter 280 of the Acts of 1925 provides that the company must obtain permits from the cities and towns through which the line would pass.

Gladys Staples, called the "Queen" of the inmates of Maine State Prison, who was released today and immediately left Thomaston for her home in Lewiston, after repeating accusations she had made previously in conjunction with two other women inmates against the former chaplain, Rev. PICKS MEDFORD CITY HALL SITE

Another chapter in Medford's battle for a city hall was written today when the commission appointed to select a site recommended the plot of land at Main street and Myrtle Valley Parkway, that city.

Since then the city has conducted business in various rented offices. Several months ago the city was granted permission to sell the old site and it was sold for approximately $110,000.

A commission then appointed to select a new site made its report today.

The board of aldermen must approve the recommendation before a new hall may be started. The site recommended contains about 4,000 square feet and is partly occupied by buildings.

TRUCK CRASHES SHOP WINDOW

A five-ton truck, a horse drawn junk wagon and another large truck figured in a crash, today, at the junction of Deane street and Prescott street known as Glovers Corner, that ended in the doorway of a furniture store.

It is Howard, driving the five-ton contractor's truck, swerved to one side to avoid a collision with a truck coming in the opposite direction. In doing so he failed to notice a junk wagon approaching, according to eye-witnesses.

He was forced to drive onto the sidewalk but could not escape hitting the junk wagon which was driven by Morris Liberman, of No. 12 Fulton street, Roxbury. The heavy truck crashed into the furniture store, scattering stove, chairs and most everything that a furniture store would exhibit in a front window.

Karl G. Glick, proprietor of the store, was standing near the doorway at the time but escaped unhurt.

IN BOSTON'S WARDS AS THEY ARE CAST

Ward One

Early indications in East Boston were for a heavy vote, working men and women presenting an early appearance at all polling places.

At the polls in the Adams, Plummer, Loring and Calverton schools there was much activity. In this ward the numerous council candidates have scores of workers on hand, striving to pull the vote out. Councilor William C. S. Hesley, a candidate for re-election is a most active worker.

At precincts 17 and 18 it was noted there was a shortage of election officers when the polls opened. The warden eventually selected three from the floor and swore them in as tellers and clerks.

Ward Two

Charlestown has been debate grounds between the Glynn and Chubbey forces during the past week. Meanwhile O'Neill and Kellow have done much quiet work and among the 400 votes cast during the first hour of polling there were many who polled for the latter two.

Twenty-five hundred votes were cast in the majority election in the seventeen precincts up to noon. This is about one-fifth of the registered vote, which is 12,235. In no precinct of the ward, up to noon, had 200 votes been cast.

Senator Thomas Green has made an active canvass for the city council, in opposition to Arthur Sullivan, and his workers are busily in every precinct to bring out a great total. The vote is not, however, unusually large and the indications are that this section is waiting for a riotous to make its choice.

WALKER 15 TO 1 FAVORITE IN NEW YORK

Odds on Democratic Candidate the Largest Ever Offered in Mayoral Fight

New York, Nov. 3 (N.Y.H.)—The voters of New York City went to the polls today to elect a new mayor. Early voting was light. The campaign had established a record for spunk on the part of the voting public. The result of the election is expected to be known within an hour after the polls close at 4 p. m. Being greatly favored James J. Walker, Democratic candidate, to win over Frank D. Watson, Republican. The betting odds placed at 15 to 1 that Walker would win, the highest ever offered on a New York mayoralty candidate.

A total vote of about 1,110,000 is anticipated. The total registration was 1,240,000.

Equally Sanguine is Mrs. Fitzgerald; Mrs. O'Neill Non-Committal

To be the wife of the "Mayor of Boston" has its alluring glamor in much the same degree as the office itself, for which ten candidates are contending today, judging from expressions by the anxious spouses of the aspirants.

Mrs. Theodore A. Glynn said: "I feel confident that when I awaken tomorrow morning I shall be the wife of the mayor-elect of Boston. He is the only Democrat in the field, so why shouldn't he be mayor? He is the people of Boston know my husband as I know him and love him, I feel sure they would all vote for Theodore A. Glynn. He's the best man in the world."

Mrs. W. T. Fitzgerald said: "The people of Boston know my husband and I know him. That's "My little win." He's a good man. I'll vote for him and I am sure he will be elected by a large majority. The Nichols boys, school young men, "booked" for part of the morning to accompany their "daddy" to the polls. Carl Ballou, eight, and Lester Frazier, six, waited their approval of their father as the city's choice.

"Shure our daddy's going to win. We know it. He does everybody else. See all the people are calling for daddy. He's the best man for the job, everybody says. You got to believe them."

Mrs. Joseph H. O'Neill seemed so anxious about the result of her husband's candidacy that she declined to discuss the outcome. "If you'll pardon me, I don't want to be abrupt, but I just can't stand the anxiety," she said. Mrs. Walter G. McAuliffe said:

CLAREMONT CLAN 'TICKET' STREETS LYNN ELECTION

Women Join in Rush to the Polls; Record Vote is Indicated

With two Councilors at large candidates stung in a verbal fight which threatened to result in blows as they appeared on a public platform before thousands of persons in the heart of Lynn, the former Senator David I. Walsh appearing in behalf of Mayor Quinn's fight for reelection, and the former Mayor, John J. Murphy, appearing in behalf of the "Klan" ticket recommending the election of certain candidates had been found by voters in several precincts. These tickets were destroyed by the police.

The chief fight today in between Ralph S. Bauer, self-styled "business candidate" for Mayor, and John J. Murphy, who claims to have the backing of the World War veterans. Bauer has conducted an unique campaign, inasmuch as he has no paid workers nor has he turned any red fire. He has simply offered himself to Lynn voters as a business man, advertising, however, in the local newspaper.

President John J. McCarthy and Councilor Charles Shea, both seeking reelection, Shea, a Lehigh man and McCarthy anti-Lehigh, were the principal speakers in the city. McCarthy finished his speech and started for the doorway. As he fought his way through the huge crowd which thronged City Hall, Councilor Shea called him back. He referred to Shea's remarks, Shea declared, by Republicans and which bore an endorsement of McCarthy's candidacy.

HEAVY VOTE IN SOMERVILLE
A heavy vote was cast today in Somerville, where the unusual city election is being held, with John M. Conwell, a former member of the Legislature and editor and manager of the Somerville Journal, as the Republican candidate for Mayor, and John J. Murphy, a veteran of the World War, as the Democratic candidate.

It was estimated that a little over 4,000 votes, or about one-fourth of the total registration of 30,000, had been cast to noon.

In Ward 2, the Democratic stronghold, and in Ward 1, a large vote was cast during the morning, over 100 votes being cast in one precinct.

PROWLER AND MELROSE COPS IN DUEL

Gives Battle With Patrolmen When Accosted in Different Parts of City

A lone armed prowler, acting suspiciously, detected by police officers in Melrose early today, fired five shots at two officers and successfully eluded the police on both occasions.

Readers of South street in the West End section, were aroused shortly after midnight when Patrolman Samuel Davis emptied his revolver at a thug after the latter had fired two shots at him from a five foot distance.

The officer noticed the man acting suspiciously on the front lawn of a home on South street.

When he came within speaking distance the officer demanded to know his business and the thug bolted across the street with Davis in pursuit.

After running fifty yards, the thug fired two shots and, darting through back yards and over fences, made his escape.

A squad from police headquarters was rushed to the scene of the shooting and while searching the vicinity were notified to report to Patrolman

1-ARMED MAN FIGHTS 3 COPS, WRECKS CAFE

Wellesley Resident Fined $15 as Sequel to a Halloween Revel; Wife Complains

Despite the fact that Edward Clarke of No. 14 Brooke street, Wellesley, had only one arm, it took three policemen to arrest him after he nearly wrecked "The Splendid," Harvard square student restaurant, following a Halloween party. It was brought out today in testimony in East Cambridge District Court.

Clarke appeared in the court on charges of non-support, disturbing the peace and drunkenness.

Clarke's wife, Nellie, said her husband was contributing $2.50 toward her support, but she claimed this was not enough.

Justice Edward A. Conlin said the support case was a civil action that should be heard in the Probate Court.

Cambridge police officers told of arresting Clarke after the fight in the restaurant. Clarke was found guilty of disturbing the peace and fined $15. The charge of drunkenness was placed on file.

A Story of Love and Mystery That Bares the Heart of the Chief Plotter

PETER BLAKENEY, a carefree young man, is in love with Rosemary Foulkes, but he forgets to propose, and Jasper Torkington wins her. Rosemary, a writer, is induced to go to Transylvania and arrange a series of articles intended to clear the air of much international unpleasantness. Instantly she finds herself in the midst of a group of plotters. Even her best friends are arrested as spies, and though her husband is a great help, he always seems to fail in his efforts. So Rosemary decides to wait and wait.

MOODLEBURY COMES TO OVAL SATURDAY

By BILL CONSIDINE

The fast, light West Virginia

University eleven is booming up like a stone wall to the crushing

Exiles. The Boston College eleven

is one of the few undefeated aggregations in the East and their chances of staying in that class depend on the outcome of the game with the Mountaineers on Saturday.

Every practice session this week at the Heights will find the coaches stirring for speed and facility in handling the elusive punter. It is even rumored at Boston College that

"Gav" will resort to the direct pass in an endeavor to do away with the fumbling that comes from the hand of the ball by the quarterback.

That, however, for the West Virginians game will be an entirely new idea, said Major Cavanaugh. "It is quite likely that three of the boys who were on the field last Saturday will be on the bench against the Mountaineers. Right now it looks as if Dwyer, Smith and maybe Mc-

Namara or Crean will see bench duty at the start of the game on Saturday.

"Dwyer has been going so well in his last two games. If he has been falling off steadily. Of course, he may only need a rest. If he does not get it, or perhaps he needs a new lease of life. He'll have to get that, too. If he wants to

DAILY SHORT STORY

THE CALL FROM BEYOND

By Jack Woodford

He was getting to some unknown point at the proper moment.

More than at any moment during the evening, he felt the presence of Adele now, she seemed as though just ahead of him, begging him to hurry. It seemed, too, now that she was tremendously happy, as though the feeling of intense loneliness had left her; he tried to force his will out at the way and yield wholly to intuition in his movements, for he was a psychologist enough to know that if he were to be reached at all from across the border, it would be through his subconsciousness rather than his consciousness.

Suddenly a great excitement came over him, and a feeling of intense elation, as though an ardent plea were about to be answered; he stood stock still suddenly upon the sidewalk in the dark, and, from just around the corner of the next street, he heard running feet. The runner reached the corner, and he made out a dark figure running toward him with all speed. The figure reached and passed him and curved away in the dark, presently another figure rounded the corner and Arlington knew that it was an effort, a shot run out behind Arlington as the fugitive turned to flee the pursuing policeman.

As he sank to the sidewalk, Arlington distinctly felt a soft and cool hand slip into his.

He could have faced the unknown, but in hand as they had faced life for fifteen years—

Terrific apprehensions had assailed him since his wife's death, vision of her alone and kneeling in a great, strange word, some afraid, crying out for him—it was an almost intolerable thought. He remembered her little way of almost placing her hand in his when they lay alone in the darkened bedroom at night. In many ways she had been like a little child suddenly forced into a woman's attire, but, retaining, always, a sort of child-like dependence upon him, she had never liked to go to places alone, and was always loathe to be left alone; and such a one had been sent to the Hima, a dark area, it was preposterous; quite unbearable and intolerable to contemplate. Arlington uneasily. A light breeze moved the curtains at the window and waited up gentle colors from the garden below—her garden.

Suddenly, unexpectedly, Arlington felt that Adele was present. He saw nothing, heard nothing, yet, quite confidently he knew that she was there. He kept his brow in concentration, in the attempt to force this strange feeling of her presence beside him. "Presently, in the state called death, one merely changed form, remained in one's old surroundings, cognizant of the old things and merely unable to make their presence seen or heard to the human senses. He stirred uneasily. The feeling that she was present grew stronger and along with it the feeling that she was terribly lonely and afraid and calling out to him some way for support. Quite seriously Arlington spoke aloud.

"Adele, are you here?" There was of course no reply to this. He continued, not in a whimsical vein, but quite seriously.

"Adele, if you are here, try to come way to communicate with me; I feel that you are unhappy and afraid; calling out to me for companionship, and I will gladly sacrifice my life to give it to you if that is the right thing to do—but I have been afraid, since your going, that should I elect to follow you of my own will, I might come under some stern condemnation—I wish I were sure that I had the right to take my life in order to be with you."

Arlington closed his eyes and listened with every faculty alert, but nothing more the subdued rumble of the great city came to him.

"What is it, Adele?" he said again aloud, "only tell me what I can do. He thought of her standing there, invisible to human eye, trying out to him, unable to make him see her, but hear her—if this were all really

He, how torturing it must be to her. Probably it was but the neurotic hallucination of overburdened nerves—and yet, by any possible chance, it should be true; it should be there, and he was to be more how heart-breaking a thing it would be! He decided to take no chances.

"Adele, if you are here, I know that you will want me to talk to you and I shall do so. I shall stay here with you and not go to bed, for, if you are not here, it can do no harm. Try, Adele, sweetheart, to give me some sign that you are here. He waited, concentrated, listened—nothing! His mind seemed upon an idle.

Had an idea.

"Adele, darling, there is a section of the city, but little distant from here, that I have never visited. I am going to put on my hat and walk there; I shall look at the number of the first house upon the corner of the district, which is bounded by Kempt street and Falmouth court—now try to get into my mind the number of the house at this corner; I have never been near it, so it is impossible that my subconsciousness not being himself to mount the steps of the dark house at the corner to ascertain the number. On down Kempt street he plunged, walking ever faster, feeling, somehow, as though everything depended upon to you when I am alone hereafter. "Oh, Adele, if you can only do it, it will be like getting you back again. . . . Try, sweetheart, now, I shall make my mind a blank, and wait for a number to come."

Steadily Arlington forced every thought from his mind, and made it as near as possible a blank. But it came over him that he was indeed receiving a number. The number was three, four and seven came to his mind, over and over again three, four, seven three, four, seven. He raised his head and spoke aloud again.

"Adele, I seem to get the number three forty-seven—we shall see." He rose and secured his hat and stick and set forth.

Desire To Hurry

Along the long walk he felt an intense desire to hurry, as though someone were urging him on, as though Adele were indeed with him and tremendously happy over something; but, strangely enough, as he neared the corner of Kempt street and Falmouth court, he felt an irresistible impulse to continue on an impulse so great that he could not bring himself to mount the steps of the dark house at the corner to ascertain the number. On down Kempt street he plunged, walking ever faster, feeling, somehow, as though everything depended upon
